Story Talking

Read and talk about the picture

Nick was so happy to see all the computer games. He looked at the car games. He looked at the sports games. He looked at the puzzle games. He looked at all the games.

“I want this one,” he said.

“At last!” said Mary.

“That’s fifteen dollars, please,” said the lady.

“I know him!” said Nick, pointing at the television. “He was in the elevator.”

“You’re right!” said Mary. “That’s Ricky Dee. I love his songs.”

“Maybe we’ll see Ricky Dee again in the elevator,” said Mary.

“I wish I was a rock star,” said Nick.

“I could be Nicky Dee.”

“Stop dreaming,” said Mary. “There’s the elevator now. Come on, it’s time to go home.”

The elevator stopped at the fifth floor again. The lady with the baby got in. The baby was pushing his mother in the stroller.

“Why is she sitting in the stroller?” asked Nick.

“Shhh!” said Mary. “She’ll hear you.”

The elevator stopped at the fourth floor again. The boy and his mother got in.

“Poor boy! What happened to his hair?” asked Nick.

“Shhh!” said Mary. “I think it looks very nice.”

The elevator stopped at the third floor. The old lady got into the elevator in some new clothes.

“Is that the same old lady? What happened to her?” asked Nick.

“Shhh!” said Mary. “She looks so cool!”

The elevator stopped at the second floor. Ricky Dee ran into the elevator. He wanted to get away from all his fans.

“That’s Ricky Dee,” said Nick.

“Are you sure that’s him?” asked Mary.

“Shhh!” said Nick. “Don’t ask silly questions.”

On the first floor, there were lots of people. Ricky Dee ran out of the store.

“Do you really want to be a rock star, Nick?” asked Mary.

“Not any more,” said Nick. “Maybe I want to be a movie star.”
